THE AMERICAN EDUCATION CORPORATION OFFERS NEW HIGH SCHOOL ELECTIVE COURSES

Oklahoma City, October 20, 2006: The American Education Corporation (AEC) – publisher of the A+nyWhere Learning System[®] (A+LS[™]) curriculum courseware program – announced today that it has recently released high school elective courses in Anthropology, Art Appreciation, Health, Humanities I, Lifetime Fitness, and Sociology. All electives meet the requirements of a one-semester high school course and are incorporated into the existing A+LS management system.

The new elective courses were created in response to an overwhelming customer demand for courses outside the A+LS courseware's popular core subjects of Language Arts, Mathematics, Science, and Social Studies, as many states currently require elective courses related to physical education and the arts to meet graduation requirements.

The A+LS Electives focus the student on gaining a broad perspective of the subject through personal exploration. As a result, there is a significant emphasis on essays, projects, journals, and constructed responses. By requiring students to research materials through a variety of resources, these courses contribute to student growth in self-reliance.

American Education Corporation (AEC) is headquartered at 7506 N. Broadway Extension, Oklahoma City, OK 73116. Contact phone numbers are 800.222.2811 or 405.840.6031.
